

Do you know a young adult with special needs ready to transition from student to employee?

Project SEARCH

is a 1-year, results-oriented, school-to-work internship program, for students (18 to 21) with disabilities, in their last year of high school eligibility that takes place entirely at the workplace.

Project SEARCH interns maximize their last year of high school by learning the marketable and transferrable skills necessary to enhance their employability before entering the workforce.

Internationally known as the model designed to support young people with special needs on their individualized journey from school to work.
